STEAMER
Will make Two Trips per Week to the CITY OF ASTORIA!
Carrying Passengers at $10, the Round Trip, (Meals Included.)
The Boat leaves Portland Wednesdays and Saturdays at 7½ A. M. Returning leaves Astoria Thursdays and Mondays at 6 o'clock A. M.
Every person purchasing a Passenger Ticket will be presented with one of 600 Prize Tickets, to be drawn on the 1ST DAY OF AUGUST, 1867, for the following Prizes:
Steamer U. S GRANT, to be divided into 4 shares;
ONE BLOCK OF LOTS IN EAST PORTLAND, divided into 8 shares, or one lot to the share, viz: Lots 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7 and 8, Block 97, opposite the "New Columbian" Hotel, and at the terminus of the proposed Suspension Bridge;
ONE GOLD WATCH, worth $100;
150 CORDS DRY FIR WOOD, in 8 shares, to be placed on the Brooklyn Wharf.
The Steamer is 54 tons burthen, 52 horse-power engine, propeller wheel, draft of water 5 feet. She is being thoroughly refitted and refurnished as a Passenger Boat. The Boat will be delivered in perfect order, free from all incumbrance, and Warranty Deeds made for the real estate, to the persons drawing the same. Tickets can be had of C. P. FERRY, in Portland, where the money will be left on deposit till the prizes are drawn and delivered.
Any person having a claim against me, and wishing a ticket, can get an order for one by calling on me on board the boat. The person drawing the gold watch can have $100 gold coin, if preferred.
C. P. FERRY, Broker, H. J. LADD, ex-Sheriff, AL. ZEIBER, U. S. Marshal, and C. S. SILVER, Merchant, of Portland are the Committee and Judges to direct the Drawing of Prizes. The Prizes will be drawn before the 1st of August, if all the tickets are taken before that time.
☞ The above liberal offer is made to the traveling public to enable the subscriber to pay his debts, and not with any reference to speculation, as all the property is valued at much less than its cost, (the Steamer alone having cost $11,000), and the price for carrying passengers to Astoria being much less than the usual fare.
Portland May 21, 1867. d2m J. W. KERN.

Notice.
OWING TO THE STEAMER U. S. GRANT having lost several regular trips, she will continue to run for a few weeks, to give all ticket holders an opportunity to travel. The tickets stand good for a passage as long as the boat continues to run. A few more tickets yet to be disposed of.

PIONEER WASHER.
JAMES BRUSIE,
AGENT FOR OREGON AND WASHINGTON TERRITORY.
THIS CELEBRATED WASHING MACHINE IS now for the first time introduced to the Oregon public. It is unrivalled for its simplicity, durability and the rapidity and ease of its action. Washing the dirtiest clothes perfectly clean in from five to ten minutes, with but slight labor, and nothing, with proper care, for ten years. The wear and tear of clothing in washing by this machine is vastly less than by any other known process of washing. It does its work by a reverse motion in forcing the water through the clothes.
It having a tight cover, the steam thus assists materially in cleansing the clothes, and also avoids the inhaling of steam from hot suds
This Machine captured the Special Premium at the California State Fair, and all that have used it pronounce it an invaluable adjunct to all housekeepers and families and washing men and washing women.
It has been extensively introduced throughout the State of California and receives the universal commendation of all who have used it.

"CAPITAL CITY CHRONICLE."

J. H. UPTON & A. NOLTNER, Proprietors.
ON SATURDAY, AUGUST 31, 1867, A LARGE SIZE WEEKLY PAPER, with the above title, will be issued at SALEM, OREGON.
The CHRONICLE will be devoted to Politics, News, and the development of the varied resources of the State In politics the CHRONICLE will be unflinchingly Democratic, supporting and advocating all those reforms in National and State policy, so urgently demanded at the present time by every consideration involving the weal of the American people The necessity for a Democratic organ firmly planted at the Capital, will be at once apparent to every thinking Democrat in the State. Such a one we propose to make the CAPITAL CITY CHRONICLE, and with the State thoroughly Democratic to-day, with all prospective changes in favor of that party, there is no valid reason why the enterprise shall not prove a complete success.
While the CHRONICLE will devote ample space to the discussion of political topics, the News of the day, the Agricultural Mining, Mechanical and Manufacturing interests of the State so large will receive due attention A twenty-eight column paper, 20x28 inches in size, will furnish ample space and enable us to present in each number an amount of reading matter equal to the importance of the interests involved We only ask at the hands of the people that legitimate patronage which shall enable us to present a sheet in every way creditable to the rising State—one which none may have the least reason to be ashamed of
All contracts for advertising and subscription existing with the late Democratic Review will be faithfully executed by the proprietor of the CHRONICLE.

South Boise Items.

The Idaho Statesman of the 20th has the following:

Judge V. S. Anderson came down from Rocky Bar last Saturday and furnishes us many interesting items. Everything that is being done up there now betokens a good time coming. The Judge brought down the finest specimen of polybasite from the Atlanta ledge we have ever seen. Mr. Liebenau, from Owyhee, pronounces it unequalled by anything he ever saw in this country or Europe. Mr. Liebenau will make an assay of it to-day when we will publish the report. The Atlanta is without doubt the most wonderful ledge in the world. It contains ore as rich as the Poorman and far more plentiful. The ledge is wider and as rich as the Comstock, not taking into account the rich streak that has been so often mentioned. The first Eastern Extension is owned by Messrs. Downing, Cimino, Straude and Sweet. Not long since they pounded up fifty-five pounds of ore which yielded three pounds and three fourths of bullion, which shows the color of gold in it. It has not been assayed, but is supposed to be worth three or four dollars per ounce. The same parties are about to run twenty tons of the same sort of ore through the Delores mill.

Messrs. Anderson & Kelly have a small two-stamp mill on Grouse creek for prospecting purposes. Two tons of ore from the Jessie Benton, crushed by it, yielded $61.

An arastra which has been running on Confederate Star, cleaned up $60 per ton.

The Idaho Company has commenced a new tunnel on a lower level, nearly down to the mill. They are taking some rock out of the old tunnel, and the mill is expected to start again to-day. They have also a large addition to their machinery now on the way which they will set to work this fall.

Col. O'Neal has arrived there. His twenty-stamp mill is on the way, and will be put up on Grouse creek this summer. His company has a fine ledge, the Hard Times, which prospects well.

Marks & Van Wyck made a run of forty tons of rock out of the Bonaparte ledge. The yield was two hundred and forty-seven ounces of crude amalgum, estimated to be one hundred and fifty ounces of gold worth twelve or fourteen dollars per ounce.

Judge Anderson tells us that he has witnessed most of these items and knows whereof he speaks. They certainly look encouraging. Alturas is slowly but surely coming out, though she has suffered terribly from petit larceny and grand larceny thieves, counter jumpers and bummers, who have spent some millions of Eastern capital there to no purpose but to disgust the stockholders and damage the reputation of the mines. Alturas prospects never before looked so substantial and so bright.

"A Rad. to a Reb, Greeting."

The following letter from General Brisbin to Raphael Semmes is published in the Columbus (Ohio), papers:

LEXINGTON (Ky.), July 18, 1867.

Raphael Semmes, Editor Bulletin, Pirate, Traitor, etc.,—SIR: Some one has sent me a copy of your paper in which you devote nearly a whole column to my late speech at Lexington, Ky. You think me incendiary, wicked, bad and a party man on the Fourth of July." What right have you, a vile wretch, living by the grace of God and the mercy of a too humane Government, to take a loyal man to task for what he may see fit to say? Have you so soon forgotten your crimes, or are you insane enough to believe they are forgotten among men, and that treason, after all, is not to be punished? For the sake of your soul I beg you not to forget the past, nor be unmindful of the future, for the day is coming when you and Forrest will both be called to a just account for your misdeeds. Pirates and butchers of innocent men cannot long live in America unhung. Be constantly prepared, for you know not the day nor the hour wherein the righteous Judge will come to do justice. Being a Christian man, when your trouble is great and deep tribulation is upon you send for me, and I will come and do all I can to prepare you for your end, though I tell you frankly I believe no earthly intercession can save you from the hottest hell of damnation. You fear "such men" as I am will "rise to power" on the shoulders of the blacks. When you recollect your awful guilt, and that by the law of nations you are an outlaw, well may your coward conscience make you fear such an event. You assail the poor blacks, and charge them with the committing of "murder, arson, riot and robbery." All good men know that the blacks have behaved wonderfully well since they were set free, and your charges are as unjust as they are false. You say such men as I instigate them to do lawless acts. You, a pirate and a traitor, are a pretty fellow to talk about lawless acts. The devil rebuking sin would be a mild comparison. I have always advised the negroes to be law abiding, quiet, sober, industrious and peaceful, and shall continue to do so. They have no occasion to take the law into their own hands, and when they do I shall condemn them as I do you. We who are their friends, by the help of God and a Radical Congress, will, in good time, in a legal way, properly

The Daily Oregonian.

TUESDAY MORNING, AUGUST 27, 1867.

The Soldiers and the President.

Nothing could more strongly condemn the course of the President than his action in regard to the prominent officers of the army on duty in the South. Nor could there be a stronger commendation of the course of Congress and the Northern people than the action of these tried and patriotic officers. What soldier who distinguished himself in the war for the Union supports the President in his course? Or what soldier of this class is opposed to the reconstruction bill and the efforts of the North to re-establish the ex-States in their old relations with the Government? Not one can be found. The position of General Grant is well known, and every utterance he gives is against the President. Generals Sheridan, Thomas, Howard, Sickles, Pope, Ord, Schofield, and every other officer who knows anything about the condition of things at the South, are ardent supporters of the Congressional policy. The President has brought himself into a conflict with these distinguished officers, and as a consequence must strengthen against himself the opposition of the people. The popularity of our great soldiers is boundless, and the President by his action towards them is daily adding to the weight of odium which for nearly two years has rested upon his head. In spite of his former defeats he still persists in having a "policy," and is constantly endeavoring to enforce his own views instead of executing the laws as he finds them and carrying out the known wishes of the people. But his conduct, though fraught with present evil, will contribute largely to one excellent and great result. It will make certain the election of a President who will enforce the national will and secure the legitimate fruits of the great struggle of ideas and arms.

A "Missionary."—The editor of the Herald makes the severe accusation against the editor of the Oregonian that he has long resided in this State, and evidently deems it greatly to his disparagement that he "has not, since his early boyhood, been out of the sight of the green forests of Oregon." This sneer at Oregon and those who have long resided here is quite characteristic of its author, who, when he came here a short time ago, evidently supposed that he was coming into a community sunk in ignorance and barbarism, and that he was a missionary whose duty it would be to labor for the civilization and enlightenment of a race of heathen. Oregon has received several compliments of this sort from him. The editor of this paper pleads guilty to the charge of a long residence here. He confesses that he belongs to Oregon, and that he thinks this somewhat more honorable than to be an adventurer and a vagabond. He has never yet been compelled to leave his country for his country's good. His experience in this line has been quite different from that of a certain editor who has found a temporary refuge here. He has not been obliged to quit his State for offenses against the public; and in this respect his fortune has been very different from that of a certain outcast from Wisconsin, California, and perhaps other States. Furthermore, he expects to remain in Oregon, as he has no fears that his residence will be interrupted by such events as have driven this outcast away from other communities into our midst. He has never had the same reason for quitting Oregon that the individual alluded to had for quitting his former place of residence, and has therefore remained here through choice, instead of fleeing somewhere else through necessity. And he has pride enough in his state to believe that Oregonians, even of that class who for a score of years have "not been out of sight of her green forests," are quite as worthy every way as these itinerating vagabonds who profess to be here for the purpose of instructing and enlightening them.

The Macon (Ga.) Telegraph is informed that the statistics of Milledgeville show the alarming aggregate of 70,000 paupers in the State of Georgia.

General Grant's Position.

The Boston Journal of the 27th of July has the following remarks on General Grant:

General Grant is made, by the last Act of Congress on the subject, the central figure in the whole drama of reconstruction. Never before in time of peace was any American citizen below the rank of President invested with such executive powers. He is not only clothed with "all the powers of suspension, removal, appointment and detail granted to the district commanders," but the latter are in most respects made subject to his disapproval. In short, he is executor-in-chief of the reconstruction policy.

We hardly need say that we have complete confidence in the wisdom which led Congress to invest General Grant with these extraordinary powers. He may or may not have believed over a year ago that the policy then professed by the President would accomplish good results—thousands who now scout his developed schemes were honestly divided in their opinions about them. But what we do know is, that wherever and whenever General Grant has been properly called upon to take a stand with reference to reconstruction, he has done it with entire satisfaction to the loyal masses. He sanctioned the bold stroke of General Sheridan in removing Governor Wells; he wrote to Ord, in contempt of Attorney General Stanberry's reasoning, that "the duty of the Board of Registration is to see, as far as lies in their power, that no unauthorized person is allowed to register;" he assured General Pope that the latter's views in regard to the misconduct of par oled rebel officers was in "strict accordance" with his own; he recorded but a short time since his conviction of the urgent need of "an efficient reconstruction measure." But it is useless to make further citations from his past record. They are all one way. And we have no doubt that the great record which he is now making and is about to make, will be found to rival his military services in glory to himself and with benefit to the country.

Strange Discovery.—The De Kalb county (Ill.), News of July 20th gives the following:

On Saturday last, as Thomas Scott, one of the workmen at the Gardner coal mine, on the Chicago and Alton Railroad, was driving an entry in the coal vein, nearly 200 feet from the surface, he found embedded in the coal, next to the face of the limestone rock overhead, a square block of stone, eighteen inches in length, one foot wide, and thirteen inches thick, partially hollow, and having the appearance of petrified wood. In the center was found two plates that appear to be solid gold. They are three inches in length, about two inches in width, and three-eighths of an inch thick. On each are some curious inscriptions and hieroglyphics. The owner has been prevailed upon to permit them to be sent to New York, where it is hoped the inscriptions may be deciphered. The Gardner Coal Company have become responsible to the miner, for the safe return of the plates, or their full value.

Improved.—Horace Greeley, in a recent temperance address in Philadelphia, stated the following as an evidence that there had been a great improvement since he was a boy:

I remember it was talked of as a great scandal if a man did not furnish liquor and tobacco at the funeral of his little child. Indeed, it was regarded quite as necessary that he should furnish his visitors with liquor as that he should furnish them with chairs. If I recollect right on the installation of the Rev. Dr. Lord, ex-President of Dartmouth College, as a young and eloquent clergyman in my native town, everybody was drunk. In fact, I don't think I ever saw a more drunken time in my life.

A Stronger Expression.—When Moore was getting his portrait painted by Newton, Sydney Smith, who accompanied the poet, said to the artist:

"Couldn't you contrive to throw into his face somewhat of a stronger expression of hostility to the Church Establishment."

Presentiment.—Butler Evans, the leading Shaker at Lebanon, N. Y., says he foresaw trouble a few weeks before Lincoln's death, and wrote to him to come and stay among the Shakers a few weeks. The letter is now on file in the State Department.

[DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.]

DATES TO AUGUST 26.

Washington News.

Chicago, Aug. 25.—The Times' special says the Intelligencer contains an article in favor of a re-organization of the Cabinet, but no official action is yet taken.

Jeremiah Black has had a long conference with the President. Rumor assigns him the position of Secretary of the Interior. Those best informed look for a re-organization of the Cabinet about the 1st of September.

The execution of the order assigning Gen Thomas to the Command of the Fifth District, is suspended on the recommendation of Gen Grant, on account of the ill health of Gen. Thomas. It is not known whether Sheridan will be permitted to remain, or whether Hancock will be assigned to the position.

Yellow Fever in Texas.

Galveston, Aug 25.—The yellow fever is slightly abating. Over one hundred of the principal citizens of Corpus Christi had died of the disease.

Doings of the Labor Congress.

Chicago, Aug. 25.—The National Labor Congress adjourned last night. It was a poor success. Only sixty delegates were present, instead of the hundreds which had been anticipated. The large skating pond had been engaged for the session of the Congress, but the non attendance caused the selection of a very small hall, which was never filled. A resolution was passed, advising against an eight-hour law by State Legislatures, until Congress passed a general law on the subject. Quite a number of wild, impracticable resolutions were adopted. Among them one declaring the soil like the air, water and light the free gift of a beneficent God to man, that to hold and traffic in any of these elements, is sacrilegious and in direct contravention of the designs of the Creator. Another demands that the government give notice of the sale of public lands to actual settlers and to none others.

The Congress quarrelled upon the question which of the several labor journals of the various parties of the country should be declared the national organ, but final ly the subject was dropped. Trevellick of Detroit, was appointed a delegate to visit Europe. Pittsburg was selected as the place of meeting of the next Congress in May. A small amount of funds was collected, it being stated that many of the Labor Unions had been on strikes lately, and had exhausted all their money. The occasion excited little interest and the concluding mass meeting last night was slimly attended.

The Indian War.

Chicago, Aug. 25.—A dispatch from Ft. Hays reports a severe fight between Capt Ames and 800 Indians, under Satank, on the Republican river, at an Indian village two miles long, which contained an immense quantity of stolen stock. After a desperate fight our troops were repulsed with a loss of 3 killed and 22 wounded, and 30 horses lost. The Indians lost severely. Capt. Ames had 125 men. The fight lasted three days. A strong force leaves for the Indian village to-morrow, when a severe battle is anticipated.

Rebels Want Government Patronage

Augusta (Ga.) Aug. 25.—The editors of the conservative press of Georgia have appointed a committee to prepare a memorial requesting Gen. Pope to revoke his order prohibiting official advertisements in conservative papers. Should he refuse the President will be applied to.

New Orleans, Aug. 25.—The lease of the Carrollton Railroad, which was assigned to the U. S. Government, has been sold on behalf of the Government to certain parties in New Orleans, for $289,000.

Gov. Flanders has appointed a colored man as a member of the Board of Control for the penitentiary, in place of a white man, removed.

Nineteen deaths by yellow fever yesterday.

Sheridan has removed the city officers as suggested by the Council. He has also issued orders that, whereas, registration is complete, the persons now registered are the only qualified voters in Louisiana. He is also directing the jury lists to be revised so as to agree with the registration.

Sickles to be Removed.

New York, Aug 25.—The Times says the President, yesterday, announced his determination to remove Sickles and appoint Canby. Sickles will be mustered out of his Brevet rank, which leaves him a Colonel in the Veteran Reserves.

New Planet Discovered.

Chicago, Aug. 25.—Professor Watson, of the Michigan University Observatory, announces the discovery of a new planet.

The Ram Stonewall.

Fortress Monroe, Aug. 25.—Secretary Seward and the French Minister arrived and visited the ram Stonewall and then returned. She has been put in thorough sea-going order, and sails for Japan to-morrow.

Raleigh, Aug. 25.—It is rumored that the Raleigh Progress newspaper is threatened with suspension, because of the radical order of Sickles.

Shipping.

New York, Aug. 26.—Arrived—steamer Nevada from Greytown, Nicaragua, inside of 21 days from San Francisco.

BY ATLANTIC CABLE.

Athens, Aug. 24.—The Greek steamer Arkadi which has been so successful in running the blockade around Crete, was pursued by a Turkish man-of-war, when the crew of the Arkadi finding themselves in danger of being captured, scuttled and set fire to the steamer and took to their boats. The Arkadi sank and the crew escaped to the shore.

Berlin, Aug. 25.—Semi-official journals in this city fiercely attack the policy of France and denounce Napoleon's action in the Salzburg conference. They assert that in spite of the denials, definite arrangements for a South German band have actually been made between America and the States of Southern Germany.

London, Aug. 25.—Dispatches from the East report that a rising has taken place at Montenegro, but has speedily been suppressed. At last accounts the country was quiet.

Paris, Aug. 25.—Reports have been received from Spain that an insurrection has broken out in the Province of Arragon. And at the present moment the rebels were carrying everything before them.

Letter from Union County.

Union, Oregon, Aug. 20, '67.

Editor Oregonian:

During the Spring and early part of the Summer wonders came to disturb the monotony of the valley of Grand Ronde. Wonders, like misfortunes, never come alone, and the citizens of Union were surprised by the unexpected appearance of Col. Dow and the meteor and the sudden disappearance of twenty head of horses. The meteor passed into the Pacific ocean, the horses into the mountains, the Colonel into a saloon. It having become known that this champion of Democracy would address the unterrified at the village school house, about thirty were present. The first two propositions upon which he dwelt were, "The Caucasian is white." "The Negro is black." Having proved these beyond a reasonable doubt, the worthy Colonel paused to wipe the perspiration from his brow, when McComus, whose business it was to attend to this matter, suddenly struck out with both feet and succeeded in getting in a couple of strong kicks before the rest knew "what was up." As soon as they did comprehend, they put in with an energy that did honor to their democracy and entirely won the confidence of Col. Dow. He then proceeded to the the third proposition in the Democratic Euclid, and demonstrated that as the negroes were out of their normal position of slavery, they would certainly become the sons-in-law of the Democrats. After the Colonel's clear exposition of this point, his listeners looked a little disconcerted, and McComus, after two or three trials, concluded that a general kick could not be got on this division. The Colonel, seeing that the truth was not always to be told, passed to the more congenial topic of the heroes and glories of the Confederate States. "Braver, more magnanimous men than the soldiers of those States never lived." But "Sheridan—the traitor—could only awake the loathing and disgust of every friend of Constitutional liberty." So spake the Colonel. Next, rising with his theme, he appealed to history. The Romans were severe to foreigners, but oh! war was always marked by the clemency of the conqueror.

His audience, who had not wasted their precious lives in reading the Marius J Scyllay, considered this argument unanswerable, as it certainly was original.

The Colonel next told an anecdote to illustrate that the Republicans brought on the war. Between telling it and making the application, he unfortunately took a drink of water—or beverage to which he is unaccustomed—and his physical and mental powers became so much disarranged that the war with all its attendant horrors was laid to the charge of the irrepressible Democracy. The Colonel now assured them they "must have their rights, by the ballot if they could, by the bullet if they must." At this, his hearers weakened. Why should they not? Had not many of them taken long journeys across the plains to avoid everything of this kind? and here it raised its horrid front again. The Colonel declared it it inevitable, and the words struck them like the shock of a galvanic battery and their hair stood up like the quills of the prickly porcupine. The Colonel took his seat, but it was some time before the unterrified could get their nether limbs in working order.

McComus, County Clerk of Union county, took the floor. He assured the company it was the aim of the Democratic party to educate backwards. All they wanted was to get the world where it was five years ago and then give it a start in a different direction.

He now assured all that he was a Democrat, and that a new State should be made of Oregon east of the Cascades with a part of Washington Territory. Then they could elect Senators, and he was and had been a Democrat. He was in favor of Democratic principles and these were to be spread by educating backwards. One of the best papers for this purpose was the Columbia Press. He had exhausted his subject matter and returned to the old stumping ground of "high taxes." As he shod no light on this point by his stammering, blundering, faubling twaddle, I leave him to fix the new State and the Senatorship.

The Democratic postmaster closed the exercises. He had little faith in the American people. He believed them unfit for self-government, but if they were to be saved, Democrats must go down into their pockets to uphold Democratic organs. Here was Colonel Dow, the editor of the Columbia Press, a sand Democratic paper that he would recommend to his fellow citizens.

He tried to think of something else, but failing, took his seat.

A motion to adjourn carried.

AURIS.

LETTER FROM SAN FRANCISCO.

San Francisco, August 20, 1867.

Editor Oregonian:

The first class steamer, Sacramento, sailed yesterday, for Panama, with a moderate load of passengers, there being only about one hundred in the cabin. Nearly all of the steamers which have arrived here this summer have been well filled, and the indications now are that during the coming autumn and winter, a large increase of our population will take place. This city is increasing rapidly. It has occasions weekly from every part of the globe and will continue improving.

The opening of the Cosmopolitan Hotel is postponed to the coming first of September, for transient guests, although weekly boarders are being received at this time. It is one of the best houses in the world, being much improved since the fire.

By your journal, it appears that the Freedman's cause is being presented to the people of Oregon by the Rev. Dr. Haynes, and that its just claims will be responded to properly. It is indeed a good cause, and no better man lives than its agent. The Rev. Dr. Haynes, represented it with equal success two years ago in this city, also a year ago in England.

In this State the political contest is waxing warm, with every indication that George C. Gorham will be elected Governor by a small majority. The probability is that the rest of the Union candidates, for Congress, will be elected.

The Times newspaper as regarded here as one of the most reliable in the city. The course of the Bulletin is universally condemned and its chief editor, it is understood, is about to withdraw from the concern.

It is rumored that ex-Governor Stanford will be a candidate for United States Senator when the Legislature meets, and he is likely to be the chosen man.

One James M. Cavanaugh has been nominated by the Democrats of Montana for delegate to Congress. Persons who know Mr. Cavanaugh say he is an unfit man for such a position, and was so regarded at Denver City, where he recently resided. Cavanaugh and Holbrook may fraternize well, however, and please severe Copperheads!

The recent news of the suspension of Edwin M. Stanton, Secretary of War, by President Johnson, is received by the Copperheads with much joy. The Union men say it will be made all right next year, when they will suspend Johnson and place Stanton in the place of Johnson as President. Mr. Stanton has the entire confidence of all honest men, and he has executive qualities necessary to fill the office properly. His election with either Colfax or Williams for Vice President is here regarded as assured by Johnson's late acts.

Throat Affections and Hoarseness.—All suffering from Irritation of the Throat and Hoarseness will be agreeably surprised at the almost immediate relief afforded by the use of "Brown's Bronchial Troches." The demulcent ingredients allay pulmonary irritation; and, after public speaking or singing, when the throat is wearied and weakened by too much exercise, their use will give renewed strength to the vocal organs.

NEWS FOR THE LADIES.—Dry Goods, Fancy as well as Staple, Fine as well as Common, will shortly arrive and be for sale at extremely low figures at the Store of KOHN & FISHEL, No. 91 Front street, who will receive, in addition to their already extensive stock, a new invoice of Dry Goods, which they will offer at prices to induce Ladies to purchase of them.

OSWEGO IRON WORKS.—In company with Mr. Gordon of Ladd & Tilton's banking house, Mr. Bull local editor of the Herald, and Mr. Scott, editor-in-chief of this paper, we visited the Iron Works at Oswego, yesterday. The works have been in full operation since last Saturday morning, and thus far, every result has been in satisfactory. It is cause for sincere rejoicing that the efforts of the enterprising company which has undertaken the development of its most important resource of our State, are now almost sure to be rewarded with complete success. It would be difficult to name an interest on this coast which may affect the general prosperity, more directly and permanently than the successful working of our iron mines. It is not so much that the proprietors may make money out of them, but it is that some of the chief courses of trade and manufactures will be turned in entirely new channels. These works, if present prospects are hereafter realized, will be able to supply the greater part of the demand of the whole coast for raw iron. This alone is a vast interest, but when we take into consideration that iron rolling mills, and manufacturing establishments of various kinds will surely follow the success of this pioneer effort, the interest which the whole country has in it is immense—entirely beyond the possibility of present conception. In view of this, we shall certainly not be censured if we devote to the various matters connected with these works, the greater part of our column, to-day

ORGANIZATION OF THE COMPANY.

The "Oregon Iron Company" was incorporated, by signing, and filing notice in the office of the County Clerk of this county and of the Secretary of the State, on the 24th day of February, 1865. The incorporators were H. D. Green, W. S. Ladd and John Green. The capital stock was fixed at five hundred thousand dollars. The stock was soon taken, the number of stockholders being twenty, including many of our most sagacious and energetic business men. On the 13th of May, following, the stockholders held their first meeting and organized under the provisions of the statute by electing a board of Directors, consisting of W. S. Ladd, H. D. Leonard, John Green, T. A. Davis, P. C. Schuyler, H. D. Green and Henry Failing. At a subsequent meeting of the Directors, W. S. Ladd was chosen President; H. D. Leonard, Vice President, and H. D. Green, Secretary. Mr. P. C. Schuyler is at present acting Secretary.

COST OF THE WORKS.

Thus far, the sum of all the assessments levied on the stock is only twenty-seven per cent, all of which has been paid in, with the exception of $21,000, delinquent by three of the stockholders. The expenditures for building, opening the mines, constructing machinery, and stocking with material, was, up to the 1st of August, between $124,000 and $125,000. Since that date, there have been, of course, some further expenditures which can, at present, only be estimated; but the total amount is probably within $128,000.

MAGNITUDE OF THE WORKS.

The company having prospected the mine which is about two and a half miles from the present village of Oswego, and having had the ore thoroughly tested, began excavating for the walls of the furnace and tower, on the 21st of May, 1865. Since then the work of building and opening the mine has been carried on without more than temporary suspension till the present day. The works are run by water, taken from Oswego Lake. The dam across the creek just below the foot of the lake, is 148 feet in length and 22 feet in height, and is a structure of great strength. The flume, by which water is conveyed to the works, is 900 feet long and 3 feet square. The machinery in the blast-house is driven by one of Leffel's Double Turbine water wheels, which also works a force pump for supplying the tanks with water. The Blast House, (where the wind is made) is 38 feet square and 20 feet high. The Casting House is 136 feet long, 58 feet wide and is a 12 foot story. The Stack Frame is 34 feet square and 34 feet high. The Top House is 34 feet square and 20 feet high. The stack and chimney together are 65 feet in height. The Bridge House is a twelve feet story, 120 feet long and 25 feet wide; one end resting on the ground on the hill side, the other supported on heavy truss work and connecting with the stack. The first Coal House, connecting with the Bridge House, is a 12 feet story, 146 feet long and 38 feet wide. The second Coal House, standing a little apart from the other, is a 24 feet story, 100 feet long and 40 feet wide. The Water Tank is 12 feet square and eight feet deep. These are the buildings which constitute the works proper; but the company has one or two other buildings in the village, one of which is a storehouse 60x27 feet and a story and a half high. The stock within which is the furnace, is a massive pile of masonry 33 feet square at the base and 34 feet high. There is probably not a finer or stronger piece of masonry on this coast than this stack. The capacity of the furnace is about 300 bushels. The buildings are supplied or to be supplied everywhere with water pipes to be used both in the ordinary daily operations, and in case of fire. Everything about the entire works, is constructed for strength and duration. In this respect, the company has wisely thought that the additional cost of heavy, strong, and finished work above that of mere make-shift, cannot fail to be returned in the duration of the works. The machinery in the blast houses is massive, and finely finished. The blast of air is obtained by the use of two large air pumps, whose pistons attach to the ends of a huge walking beam. The air is forced through a Regulator which serves to keep the current constant. In the regulator, as the machinery was driven yesterday, the pressure of air was five-eighths of a pound to the square inch. From the Regulator, the air is forced through a loop pipe to the top of the stack when it goes through several large cast tubes as places as to be all the time red hot. This is for the purpose of heating the air before it strikes the fire and mass of ore at the bottom of the furnace. From these heating tubes, the air then goes through large tubes concealed in the masonry, to the bottom of the furnace where it is discharged with great force into the interior of the furnace. The effect upon the burning mass of coal, ore and lime is something too fierce for description. To prevent the end of the air pips from being consumed by the intense heat, it is inserted in a massive piece of casting, called a tuier and which is subjected to a constant stream of cold water.

MAKING IRON.

The first casting of iron into pigs was made on Saturday, August 24th. The manner of doing it is something as follows: Of course the furnace has had fire in it for some time and was hot when the work began. The workmen first put in at the top, 25 bushels of coal, then 800 pounds of ore, adding to this mass about twenty per cent of lime stone. This proportion is observed till the furnace is full. The limestone and ore are broken under the hammer, before being put in the furnace. The use of the lime is to amalgamate with itself all the dross and impurities of the ore, reland in the form of cinder. This dross is constantly drawn off from the furnace at the hearth, and when cooled, is thrown away. The Company propose to use it for grading their roads and grounds. When the reservoir at the bottom gets full, the hearth is tapped, the molten iron runs off in a sparkling white stream, down a channel to the pit where it falls, first, into a gutter called the sow, and from this into smaller and shorter gutt rs where the iron is shaped into pigs. Yesterday the hearth was tapped twice, the result being about six tons of pig iron. It is expected that, when the furnace gets formed and thoroughly heated, the company will be able to cast three times at least in 24 hours, making between three and four tons at each casting. The ore now used yields about 55 per cent of iron which would be considered anywhere in the world, very rich. The coal costs about 6 cents per bushel. Lime costs $2 per ton. The ore is estimated to cost about $1 75 per ton. The company is now employing 80 men as miners, coal burners and hewers, teamsters and artisans at the works. The coal houses now have in them about 80,000 bushels of coal and it is coming in at the rate of about 2,500 bushels per day. The iron thus far cast, is pronounced by Mr. Harris, the superintendent of the Works, and by other competent judges, to be equal in quality to any made in the United States. It is very soft and very fine in grain, and, it is said, might be worked into castings for machinery as run off from the furnace.

To conclude this article we will mention that, of the first casting Mr J. C. Trullinger the proprietor of the town site, has secured two pigs which he will have engraved with his own initials, the date of casting and the trade stamp of the company, and then planted as street monuments at the corners of blocks No. 1 and 2, at the junctions of Furnace, Ladd and Durham streets.

FROM MT. HOOD.—Col. Williamson and party returned last evening from their trip to Mt. Hood. The company had a very pleasant excursion, with no accident to mar the enjoyment of the grand mountain scenery. The scene from the mountain top is represented as being grand, though in some directions the smoky state of the atmosphere obscured the lower country. One of the party was lot down, by means of ropes, into the crater. At the time of descent, there was but little smoke issuing from the fissue, though fumes of sulphur and what was thought to be arsenic, were rising. The sight from this subterranean cavern was grand, for the snow had melted and run down forming mighty icicle pyramids. The altitude cannot as yet be computed to a certainty as Col. W. has not seen observations which were to be taken on the day of his ascent, which was on Friday last; though by a rough calculation, the height of the mountain is estimated at 11,000 feet. In a few days we hope to get the full particulars of the trip as well as the exact height of the mountain peak.

ACCIDENT AND DEATH.—A man named Patrick McMahon, a teamster who has been in the employment of the Oregon Iron Co., at Oswego, for nearly a year, was thrown from a wagon on Saturday, and falling before the wheels, was run over and crushed about the jaws and neck in a horrible manner. A couple of other teamsters, who witnessed the accident from some distance, immediately ran to his assistance and took him to the Company's works, where he received all possible medical care, but to no purpose; he died yesterday morning about seven o'clock. The accident occurred about 4 o'clock, Saturday afternoon.

CAPT KERN'S NEW STEAMER.—We were shown, a day or two since, a sketch of the steamer now in course of construction by Capt Kerns at Rainier. Judging from this representation of her, the little steamer will be a handsome little craft. Capt Kerns says the hull has been already completed, and the lumber for her cabin and upper works, is all on the ground. It is expected she will be ready to launch in about two or three weeks. She will be brought up to this city, before putting her permanent fly on the Cowlitz trade, where she is to be run when finished.

HEAVY TUGGING.—The steamer Rescue undertook, yesterday afternoon to tow the dredger and a scow down to Swan Island bar, but in consequence of high wind, was unable to proceed. The Okanagon went to her assistance; but even this double team found it difficult to accomplish the job. After much puffing and wheezing the two steamers, however, placed their heavy tow in position in the channel at Swan Island.

WILLAMETTE FRUITS.—Arrived per steamer Senator, from Oregon City, Monday the 26th: 28 box eggs, 128 gunnies bacon 3 gunnies hams, 30 bbl bbls butter 4 kgs do, 1 box do, 20 box produce 9 bbl bbls do, 425 qr sks flour, 2 sks fruit, 5 bbl bbls eggs, 28 box apples, 16 box plums, 1 roll matting, 3 bales woolen goods, 65 cases lard, and 1 box cheese.

ELECTION.—The Spartan B B Club was organized last evening by the election of the following officers. R. E. Bybee, President; B. P. Quivey, Vice President; Wm. Chapman, Secretary; W. Henderson, Treasurer; Directors, R. E. Bybee, E. Henderson and Samuel Bachtel.

STABBED.—We are informed by Capt Turnbull, of the Fannie Troup, that a drayman named Bateman, was stabbed in the abdomen, at Vancouver on Saturday night last by a half breed Indian. The weapon used was a pocket knife. The attending surgeon expresses fears that the wounded man will die, as he was bleeding internally.

DAINTY CHICKENS.—Mr. D. Monaston went up on Saturday to the Dalles for a day's shooting of prairie chickens. He came back yesterday, and showed us with pride his sack, on the shoulder, in the night shot 17 of the Dalles is very fine. We are indebted to Mr. M. for several fat chickens.

DURABLE BOOTS AT CHEAP DOLLARS.—Kast & Caballin are actually selling Boulcott's boots at $8, per pair and everything else in the line of boots and shoes, at correspondingly low prices. You had better go right up to Kast & Caballin's and buy you enough to last through the hard times.

GOING HOME.—Mr. Gault editor of the Sentinel, having made a visit here of near two weeks, takes his departure this morning for Jacksonville, and upon reaching home will resume the editorial charge of the paper.

OPERA TO-NIGHT.—The last appearance of the Bianchi Troupe will take place to-night at Ore Pine Hall. People will remember that the ticket office will be open only from 10 A M to 3 P M.

BARMAN BROS., on corner Front and Morrison streets, have already introduced the Fall and Winter styles of Custom-made Clothing and at 25 per cent less than they were sold the season of 1866.

OVER ONE HUNDRED MEN BURIED IN A COAL MINE.—The columns of the European German papers are filled with the particulars of one of the greatest disasters that ever desolated any mining district. On the 1st of July last the wooden frame work of a 1,500 feet deep pit of a coal mine in the neighborhood of Lugan, in Saxony, gave way, blocking up with an impenetrable mass of timber and rock, the pit, at a depth of about 100 ells from the top. At the moment of the disaster 102 men, nearly all of them the supporters of large families, were working in the bottom of the mine. Their provisions were only calculated for one day. On the 5th of July, the date of our latest news by mail, the place where the fallen masses had stopped the pit was such a solid structure that the water was standing on it many feet high. From all sides the most available help was offered, but the conviction that nothing could be done soon enough to save the unfortunate miners, weakened, as it seems, any energetic efforts. They were doomed to die of starvation and want of fresh air. On the 4th of July all attempts to reach the bottom of the mine by any quick process were abandoned, and a slow but sure plan was devised by which at least the corpses of the perished could be extracted. Iron tubes of about two feet in diameter were to be sunk through the obstructions to the bottom of the pit. Among the dead are 44 married men, one of whom had a wife and nine living children. The scenes at the entrance of the pit are described as lamentable without a parallel; 137 children filled the air with their woful cries, whilst the Superintendent of the mines, to whose negligence the disaster was ascribed by the people, could only be saved from being mobbed by his sudden imprisonment.

A witness in the Court at Lynn, Massachusetts, giving his testimony in a very quick and excited manner, was stopped by Judge Newhall, when he replied:

"It's the fault of my tongue. I should have made a better lawyer than shoemaker, I know."

SHIP CANAL.—Surveys have been commenced for the improvement of the Illinois river, and its extension by means of a ship canal, so as to admit the passage of 1,200 ton steamers, thrust from Chicago to St. Louis.

PERFECTLY ENRAPTURING.—Such were our feelings as we stepped into the Music and Art Gallery of W. T. SHANAHAN, on First street, a few days since, and listened to the delightful tones and harmony which came from one of Mason & Hamlin's Cabinet Organs. From the soft breathing flute tones to the thundering bass of the pipe organ, all was equally free and sweet. And why is it other makers cannot produce instruments like these? Mason & Hamlin were the first to introduce the Cabinet Organ, and have gained such world-wide notoriety that it requires the work of two large factories to supply the demand for these valuable instruments.

HELMBOLD'S FLUID EXTRACT BUCHU

Is a certain cure for diseases of the
BLADDER, KIDNEYS, DROPSY, ORGANIC WEAKNESS, FEMALE COMPLAINTS, GENERAL DEBILITY, and all diseases of the
URINARY ORGANS,
whether existing in
MALE OR FEMALE,
from whatever cause originating and no matter of
HOW LONG STANDING.

Diseases of these organs require the use of a diuretic. If no treatment is submitted to, Consumption or Insanity may ensue. Our flesh and blood are supported from these sources, and the HEALTH AND HAPPINESS,
and that of Posterity, depends upon prompt use of a reliable remedy.

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU,
Established upwards of 18 years, prepared by
H. T. HELMBOLD, Druggist,
594 Broadway, New York and
104 South 10th Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER.

Travelers are always liable to sudden attacks of dysentery and cholera morbus, and those occurring when absent from home are very unpleasant. PERRY DAVIS' VEGETABLE PAIN KILLER may always be relied upon in such cases. As soon as you feel the symptoms, take one teaspoonful in a gill of new milk and a glassful, and a gill of hot water. Stir well together and drink hot. Repeat the dose every hour until relieved. If the pains be severe, bathe the bowels and back with the medicine, clear.

Fishermen, so often exposed to hurts by having their skin pierced with hooks and fins of fish can be much relieved by bathing with a little Pain Killer as soon as the accident occurs; in this way the anguish is soon abated, bathe as often as once in five minutes, say three or four times, and you will seldom have any trouble. Sold by dealers everywhere.

MANHOOD AND YOUTHFUL VIGOR are regained by HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU.

STRENGTHEN THE SYSTEM.—The best means of imparting vigor to the broken down frame and shattered constitution, which has yet been invented or discovered, is proffered to the feeble of both sexes and all ages in
Debility, from whatever cause arising, may be cured; strength, in whatever manner it may have been wasted, may be restored by the use of this powerful and healthful invigorant. For indigestion and all its painful effects, bodily and mental, they are a positive specific. Sold by Druggists and dealers everywhere.

Fish for the Hall.

[From Once a Week.]

"Now, then, which of you is going to get me a big fish? Don't all speak at once. Come, one of you must. Which is it to be? Joe'll go I know, won't you Joe? I must have one before to-morrow night for the squire. You needn't look so black, all of you."

Jenny Cooper, the speaker, was the prettiest girl in Shippon, and certainly she looked uncommon pretty now, as she stood with her face flushed and her bright hair ruffling in the breeze in the middle of a knot of admirers at the gangway which ended the principal street of the village. It was a black time in Shippon. The herring fishing was just over—such a fishing as there had not been for years. The fishermen spoke of one shoal of herrings twenty miles long and ten broad, and so thick that their nets were torn with the weight of the fish. Many of the boats had had to run into Harmouth deep loaded after a single haul.

The only boat which had not done well was one belonging to old Tim West, Jenny's grandfather, and the squire which had been put in charge of young Joe Crask. She had run aground just before the great haul, and had had to put in for repairs, which cost a good deal of money. The consequence was that poor Joe, instead of having to receive a hundred pounds or so for his share of the fishing, found himself actually out of pocket, and worse off than all his neighbors and rivals. His old mother had not a hundred of coals to begin the winter with, and his chances of Jenny, which had looked so bright as he started, seemed more distant than ever.

It was "aggrewating," as he said, poor fellow, and it was not unnatural that he should have listened to the two pairs of banns which had been put up in church for the first time last Sunday very much as if they had been intended for personal insults to himself.

The big boats had come in to land their tackle a week ago, and then, what with noisy fish-sales on the beach and shouting men and women hauling in the lines and heavy ropes, and crab boats pulling backward and forward through the breakers, Shippon for a time had been all excitement and life. Now the bustle was all over.

Only a few of the crews were back from Harmouth, and the weather had been so unsettled that none of the small boats had ventured out, and the beach was almost deserted. It happened that when Jenny broke into the group on the cliff they had just been discussing the horizon, and had come to the conclusion that it was going to be an uncommonly ugly night, and the consequence was that there was by no means the eager competition she considered there ought to have been for the honor of going to sea to catch her a fish.

"Now, come, one of you must go. Come, Joe, you will, won't you, that's a dear? I don't know how many people there ain't a coming to the Hall. There was the squire himself come down this morning, and says, 'Jenny,' says he, 'if you don't get me a fish I don't know what I won't do to you. I don't care if I have to have you cooked yourself.' You wouldn't like that now, Joe, would you?"

But serious blandishments and satire (and Jenny was a good hand at both) were thrown away, and even the last terrible suggestion of the squire's chief kettle could win her point; so the pretty girl tossed her head and said, in her most contemptuous tone, "You ain't none on you fit to catch a big fish. I won't have nothin' more to say to you," and went off in a huff.

Joe Crask had been standing with the others, but, as usual, to answer Jenny when she appealed directly to him, he had taken no part in the conversation.

He was at her light figure tripping up the street as it turned a corner out of sight; and then, with his hands in his pockets, he sauntered down the gangway and over the breakwater, till he came to a gap in the cliff where a little stream of fresh water ran down a hollow and loses itself among the rocks on the beach. A narrow plank bridge spanned it about a hundred yards or so from the shore, and there Joe stopped in the hope of seeing Jenny, who lived with an old grandfather in a cottage on the opposite cliff. It was beginning to get dusk already; and he had not waited many minutes before he caught a glimpse of a print dress fluttering down the winding path and she was beside him.

"Stop a minute, Jenny dear," he said. (The plank was only broad enough for one, and he had to run a minute.) Jenny. I brought this for you from down with. You'll have it won't you?" It was a few yards of blue ribbon. "I could ha' bought summat better, Jenny, only you know I wasn't in it."

"Now, Jenny be a good girl, and don't be a tyrant and break my heart." Jenny was not fond of being thwarted. She had set her heart on getting a fish for the squire, and it was not to be had, she felt pettishly enough, and was not at all ready for an opportunity of snubbing poor Joe, who, she knew well enough, cared for it.

"Thank you I'm very much obliged; but I don't want any ribbons. When I do I'll buy myself. Good night. Please let me come by. I must go home."

"I'll get a fish for you, Jenny; I thought you'd like it. Do stop a minute, Jenny. I swear there is not safe to go to sea, Jenny, to-night, or I'd go out in a minute. You know I would, Jenny."

"Thank you I don't ask nobody to go if they are afraid. Please let me come by, I'm late. She pushed by him, but he held her.

"Jenny, Jenny, don't speak to me like that. I can't bear you should ever think of the fishing, and I won't abide to have you speak to me of that never. Jenny. Stop a minute, do—Jenny, dear Jenny!"

She was gone and Joe was supremely miserable. It was dark before he left the bridge. "Reckoning after that gal again," thought his old mother as she gave him his supper, before he went off to bed at seven o'clock. "Them gals don't know what they be well off. Higgerty, jiggerty they be, so aggerwating! She ain't worth it."

At half past eight o'clock punctually the next morning Squire Linton came down into the dining room and rang the bell for usual prayers.

He was a fine tall man of fifty-six—the age at which Mrs Norton maintains that a handsome man is most picturesque.

He had a pleasant, open face, broad forehead, thin curly hair, and a color which smacked unmistakably of wine breezes and exercises in the open air. He, you had belonged to his family since 1066, when in London—if tradition speaks true, no better than he should have been—had received the heiress in payment of a bad debt from Edward II.

The estate was extensive, though anything but a rich one. The greater part consisted of healthy hill, and the land which was under cultivation was very poor. Though, however, there were many worse off men in the country, none held their heads higher than Squire Linton. He was proud of his old house, with the family motto and "Linton Doo" in venerable gray letters running as a balustrade, the whole length of the front proud (will wiser readers smile at him?) of the moral inheritance of family tradition and a good name; and all the more fondly proud of his only daughter Edith, a bright girl of nineteen in whose her laughing brown eyes and fair waving hair were precisely those of a beautiful picture by Loly, which held an honorable place among the family portraits which hung over the black oak staircase and covered the panelled walls of the great stone hall. She came into the hall and held up her face to be kissed, just as he had finished reading his letters and was cutting his newspaper.

"I'll tell you what it is, Miss Palaface," he said, as he took the little upturned face in both his hands and kissed it tenderly—"I'll tell you what it is, we must not have any more dancing if we can't get our roses back in two days after it. Hadn't we better make mamma write and tell the stupid people not to come on Thursday. Eh, Miss? what do you say?"

"Oh, papa! how it has been blowing. It woke me at half past three, and I could not go to sleep again, at all. Jane says Holland was up here just before she came to me, and told her more than fifty trees were blown down between four and five. Oh, I do hope all the boats are safe at Harmouth before now."

"It's off shore, darling, and I don't think it will have done any mischief here except to my trees, but go and look on the table and see if you can't find anything to bring back those roses."

The missing roses did come back in a minute as Edith snatched up a letter. It was from her brother's college chum, Sir Arthur Hamlin, the fortunate heir of some seven thousand a year in a ring fence not thirty miles from Shippon—more fortunate still in his own estimation in having won the love of the sweetest girl in the country, and being engaged to Edith Linton.

"Well, dear, when is he coming?" asked Mrs Linton. A large party was expected at the Hall the next day for a week's shooting and a ball, and Sir Arthur, as a matter of course, was to be one. "Will he wait to pick up Henry at Cambridge, or will he come over to-night?"

"I don't know, mamma. I expect he'll very likely be here to-night. He says—' My new yacht, the Edith, is at Wellport. If it's very fine indeed, perhaps I shall bring her round to Shippon for you to see. I have had some alterations made in the cabin, and I know you will like her. If the weather is in the least bad, I shall look out for Henry at Norborough; and drive over on Tuesday night or Wednesday morning.' He'll be here today, I know he will! It was so windy yesterday morning that he would not have gone down to Wellport at all, so he'll sure to be over with Henry this afternoon. I must go down to Lower Shippon this morning."

"My darling, indeed you mustn't do any such thing," said Mrs Linton, "I can't think of letting you go out at all in such weather. Why it's raining hard. You would catch cold and be laid up all the week, if you were not blown away over the cliff. You know you would."

"Oh, mamma, please. I've got ever so many things I must do, and I shan't have another chance. Please do, let me, mamma."

"Well, dear, we will see how it looks after lunch, you must take a book and be quiet till then. You haven't got rested after the Harton dance yet, so give me another cup of coffee, and then finish your own breakfast, like a good child."

The sun had found its way through the rolling clouds, and the wind had dropped before Edith had finished her book, and the luncheon was ready. So her ponies were ordered, and she drove off, armed with plenty of wrappers and a basket of jellies and soup. About half way down from the Hall to the village, a fisherman stopped her to say that old Susan Crask was in trouble again. Her boy Joe had got up early in the morning and gone out to sea alone, without saying a word to any one, just before the squall.

They had missed his boat on the beach, and a man coming along shore some hours after had picked up one of his oars, and a bailing tin which was recognized as his. "I ax your pardon, Miss," the old fellow went on, "but I was just coming up to tell you, Susan she takes on terribly about it, and I thought Miss, as how mayhap you wish to be coming to see her if you knowed."

"Oh! I'll go now at once. I am so sorry. Whatever could have made him go out such a morning?—and all alone, too. Oh, how shocking it is! Poor old Susan."

The old man shook his head mysteriously, and said in a low tone, "they do say, Miss, as how it was Jenny Cooper made him go to get her a fish. They do say so. They was a keepin' company, you know, Miss."

In a very few minutes Edith was at the cottage. She tapped quietly, and went in. The room into which the door opened was low and dark; but the floor was neatly sanded, and everything, from the bottles of different colored sands and the model ship on the mantle piece, to the old fashioned walnut drawers against the opposite wall, was carefully dusted and scrupulously clean.

In a low chair, in front of the little fire which burnt in the corner of the grate, sat Susan Crask, rocking herself slowly backwards and forward, and moaning every now and then. Besides her stood Jenny, pale and silent, with a touching wistful look in her eyes, but the old woman took no notice of her, and scarcely seemed to know she was there.

When Edith came in she made a slight movement of recognition, but said nothing, and went on rocking herself as before. Edith's own eyes were so dim that she saw nothing of the hopeless look in poor Jenny's face as she handed her a chair.

"Poor dear old Susan!" she said, as she took the old woman's horny hand in hers. "Poor old Susan!"

There was a silence, broken only by Susan's moans, which were deeper than before, and the hollow tickings of the old upright clock in the corner. At last she spoke:

"I knowed how 'twor—I knowed how 'twor when I heard his voice come in at the window, I knowed what that meant. Father, brothers, husband, and now my boy! Oh! Joe, Joe! to forget old mother for a pink murtherin hissy!" The flood gates were open and the old woman sobbed like a child.

Poor Jenny! Her punishment had come quickly—a bitter punishment it was, poor girl. What might have been and what was; how different all seemed now, now that it was too late—how that his mother had called for her, his murderess. Poor child! She dared stay no longer, and too miserable to care where she went or what she did, she stole noiselessly to the door and out into the street. The men and women looked at her and whispered as she passed; but she took no notice of anything, and hurried through the little narrow turnings which led out past the preventive houses into the field beyond the village. There she was alone. For the length of a field or two the cliff above Shippon gets gradually higher, till at the Sugar-Loaf it towers up three hundred feet above the sea. A little beyond the highest point a huge mass of the upper soil and turf, loosened probably by the land springs, had become detached and slipped bodily down, and rests suspended between sea and sky, a hundred feet from the top of the cliff and a hundred and fifty from the beach below.

There is a great charm about the "Gull's Nest," as the spot is called. You seem to overhang the sea. Wherever you look is sea, nothing but sea. To the left is sea, stretching away to a low line of purple. That is Rakeston Harbor—ten miles off. To the right, beyond the sharp chalk needles that hem in the Gull's Nest on that side, you look over sea unlimited—sea which seems to rise up and mix with the sky.

But the view had no charms for Jenny. She scrambled down the cliff, and threw herself down out of sight, out of hearing of the village, among the damp grass, and strained her eyes all over the waste of waters.

It was low tide, and the breakers were growling surlily among the naked rocks a couple of hundred yards from the foot of the cliff. A single little schooner was tossing about far out beyond the sand bank, almost hidden at times by the white crested waves, but not a sign of his boat. She hid her face in her hands and cried as if her heart would break.

The wind had veered round since the morning, and was blowing now in short, uncertain gusts from the sea. Jenny had nothing at all on her head, and was cold and shivering, when something colder even than her own poor little wet cheek, touched it for a moment. Edith's pet white and yellow setter had found her, and looked at her with a puzzled expression in his great hazel eyes as she started up, just in time to see his mistress climbing down to her. Edith had heard which way she had gone, and had come to look for her.

"Come home, Jenny," she said, gently; "don't stop out in the cold any longer. How wet you are! You'll make yourself ill, and then what will become of poor old Tom?"

"Oh, miss!—oh, miss! that's all my fault. I wish I was dead, I do!" and she threw herself down again, choking with a fresh burst of tears.

There is something wonderfully soothing and strengthening in sympathy. It seems almost as if every sorrow, small or great, brought a certain appointed weight with it; a weight which must be carried somehow or other. No friend may relieve us of our share altogether, but a kindly helping hand may ease the weight as surely as if the burden were material.

Jenny, like old Susan, found it so; and both felt their hearts a little lighter before Edith drove away. She had not started a minute too soon. Her ponies were not long in whisking her home, but the wind had begun to blow hard, and she had only just time to run down to the greenhouse for a bunch of Russian larkspur for her hair before it began to rain again.

Dinner was laid at half-past six for five, but Edith and her father and mother sat down by themselves, half expecting every minute to hear the sound of wheels on the gravel in front, and a ring at the bell; but they were disappointed, and at eleven o'clock Mr Linton got up and put down his book and stretched himself in front of the drawing-room fire, and said—

"Well I don't think these boys will turn up to-night now. If they had caught the six o'clock train they would have been here before now, so I think we had all of us better go to bed. What a noise the wind does make, to be sure. We have not had such a gale all the year. Come, missey, put down your work and trot off. Here is a candle for you. I shan't be long I know before I'm asleep for one.

The wind shrieked among the gables and chimney stacks, and the windows rattled till a stranger might have thought that the whole place was coming down, but the old hall had stood every storm for a good many hundred years and was likely to stand for a good many hundred more.

The squire was too much accustomed to the noise of a "north easter" to let it disturb him in the least; but he had not been many minutes in bed, and was only just settling into his first sleep, when another sound caught his attention, and he started up to listen. He had not time to rub his eyes before it came again. A bang and rattle at his window. Some one below was throwing gravel at the glass. Mr. Linton knew well enough what the noise meant, and jumped out of bed and threw up the window.

"Hullos, is that you, Tim? What is it?"

An old man in a long oiled coat and sou'-wester stood in the garden beneath.

"What is it, Tim?"

"Skowner, sir, in again the Gull's Nest."

"Stop there; I'll be down in a minute. Stop there."

Unfortunately a shipwreck was only too common an event at Shippon. In a very few minutes Mr. Linton was dressed and had waked up the butler and given orders.

"Wake George, and tell him to put the brown horse in the omnibus, and take plenty of rugs and coats and wait at the Linton Arms, to be ready if he is wanted. Tell him to send one of the boys on 'Lady Gay,' as hard as he can ride, to Captain James for the mortar, and be sure there is a good fire kept up in the kitchen."

Squire Linton and Tim fought their way as best they could against the hurricane. It was slow work, and the "huss" was at the village almost before they reached the Gull's Nest by a short cut.

Then it was no easy matter to stand there at all. The huge waves were thundering half way up the cliff, and the sea, whenever they could catch a glimpse of it though the bounding shower of foam flakes which blew in their faces, was black as ink. A single light showed the direction of the doomed ship, and every now and then as she rose for a moment on some giant wave they could see her black hull and spars against the sky. She had cleared the shoal, and was driving straight in for the "Needles."

"If she strikes there," said a coastguard man as the wind dropped for a few seconds, "that will be all over very quick."

If only she could round the point, (but who on board was to know that?) there was a chance of saving the crew, if the mortar arrived in time. A chance, but a desperate one. It would be hopeless to attempt to get the life-boat off in such a sea. It was only in the momentary lull that the crowd of eager watchers on the cliff could hear one another speak.

"What is she?" shouted the squire. "Can you make her out?"

"Not altogether, sir. She seemed a'most as though she was standing in this afternoon afore the wind changed. She appeared more like a big yacht nor anything. I don't doubt that's what she is."

A gentle hand was laid on the squire's arm. He started as he looked round and saw his daughter.

"My child, how could you ——?"

Papa, papa, it's the Edith!" and she fell helpless into his arms.

"Edith had not gone to bed when she left the drawing room. She had sent her maid away, and sat down in an easy chair in front of the fire, and had fallen asleep and was dreaming when the noise in the house roused her. Her first idea was that Sir Charles and her brother had come, but very soon she understood that it was a wreck, and seized with a horrible, indefinite dread, such as she had never felt before, she snatched up her hat and a thick cloak and veil and ran down stairs just as the boss was starting, and jumped in.

"The first word which caught her ear on the cliff were—" She appears more like a big yacht nor anything. I doubt that's what she is."

The fatigues of the day of unusually painfully excitement, the solitary night drive from the Hall, and the last crowning agonies of finding her worst fears realized, had been to much for the slight, delicate girl, and overtaxed nature brought its own relief. Her father lifted her up, and carried her, fainting, to the village. A light in the Widow Crask's window showed that she was still up. She pushed the door open, and laid Edith down on the old woman's bed, and knelt beside her, holding up her head, while Jenny, who had followed them down from the cliff, and Susan bathed her temples with vinegar, and chafed her cold hands and feet. It was some time (to her father it seemed ages) before she showed any signs of returning life; but at last she opened her eyes and looked dreamily round her. As soon as Jenny had seen her move, she pulled her shawl over her head and left them noiselessly to learn the worst. Her hand was almost on the latchet of the door, when it opened. A confused sound of voices reached her ear from the street, and a tall dark figure, with dripping hair and naked feet, stood in front of her. For a moment Jenny thought she saw a ghost, the next she gave a scream, burst into tears and threw her arms around Joe's neck. They were no ghost's lips which met hers. The breath was warm. It was Joe himself, alive from among the dead—alive and well.

"All on us safe?" Squire Linton and Edith heard it. "All on us safe, thank heaven!"

How Joe came there is soon told. The squall in the morning soon caught him as he was hauling in his line. He had lost one of his oars, and had drifted out to sea, and had tossed about helpless for hours. The waves which had carried away his oar had half-filled his boat, and he had been obliged to keep bailing with his sou-wester as best he could. He had almost given up altogether, when from the top of a wave he sighted a ship close by him. In a minute he had stripped off his red handkerchief, and hoisted it as a signal of distress on his boat-hook: and in less than half an hour, by one of those providences which we call lucky chances, found him on board Sir Arthur Hamlin's yacht, just about the time that Edith was driving home to the Hall. As Jenny had noticed when she left the "Gull's Nest," the wind had chopped quite round, and was blowing hard, with a strong tide on shore. The sea, which had been high all day, was still making fast, and by the time he had a mouthful to eat and drank below, it was almost pitch dark. Joe had been born and bred at Shippon. He had been out in big boats, and little boats, rough and smooth, light and dark, till he knew every yard of the coast for ten miles, as well as he knew the village itself. When he came on deck again a single glance was enough to show that the Edith was on the shoal. Another minute and she would be hard and fast aground. "Port your helm!" he shouted, at the top of his voice, and sprang to the wheel. The storm jib, the only canvas she was carrying, flapped empty for a moment; the next a huge roller lifted her high out of the water. There was a hollow grating sound, and the vessel shook from stem to stern. In another moment she was in deep water inside the bank.

"Touch and go, sir. Better coast out a couple of anchors, or we shall be on the Needles afore we know where we are."

At half-past eleven the storm was still increasing, the hatches were down, and everything made snug. The yacht still rode head to the wind; but the waves were awful. Sir Arthur and Joe were on deck, holding on as best they could. Five minutes before the cliffs had looked through the darkness like black uncertain clouds resting on the water. Now they could see the "Sugar-loaf," frowning huge and sharp, out against the sky." The terrible truth flashed on them both at the same moment. The anchors held no longer and they were drifting in.

"Cut her free for heaven's sake!" shouted Joe. "If we can get her round the Needles we may get a rope ashore; if not, we are done for."

A very few minutes after the Squire left them the watchers on the cliff saw the vessel give a lurch and spring in. Another bound and the point was cleared, and the Edith lay a wreck, with the spent waves breaking over her, wedged fast in the little bay at the foot of the "Gull's Nest."

There was a pause for a minute or two. To those on deck it seemed ages. Then came a red flash from the land, and a roar that was heard above the sea. A shot whizzed far out over their heads, and a rope fell across the vessel's bows. In half an hour's time the last sailor was safe on the cliff.

Our readers must picture for themselves the happiness which changed the old woman's tumble down cottage into a palace that night. We will not ourselves attempt to describe with what humble, grateful tears the widow received back her boy from the dead, nor even how the pretty Jenny forgot her coquettishness for once, and clung round Joe's neck before half the village, like an April-sun and showers together. Above all, we will not venture to intrude into the little inner room. Mr. Linton himself did not, and Edith was alone when she met her lover.

We have only one thing more to tell, and that will not surprise our readers, perhaps much more than it did any one in Shippon. The Sunday after the storm two pairs of banns were put up in church instead of one. The names of the last couple were "Joseph Crask and Jane Cooper."

RHEUMATISM CURED!

PORTLAND, August 10th, 1867.

I HAVE SUFFERED A LONG TIME WITH RHEUMATIC Pains, and until now have found nothing to relieve me. To-day Mr J. G. Rennick called at my store and assured me that he could cure me in a few minutes. I thought he was mistaken, and laughed at him, but found to my surprise that a few moments after the application of the SITKA LINIMENT, I was relieved of my pains, and I am now improving very fast. I now believe it will cure me in a few days. For further information call at my store, No 162 First street.

SPRAINED WRIST CURED.

PORTLAND, August 10, 1867.

I was at Mr Wegner's store on Saturday, August 10th, and seeing the magic effect of J. G. RENNICK'S SITKA LINIMENT, in his case, concluded to try it on my wrist which has been sprained for some time. I found relief inside of FIVE MINUTES from its application, and it is now perfectly well. My wrist was so swollen I could not shut my fingers. I believe it will cure any pain in a short time. I will give any further particulars to whoever calls on me.
